

How to Find a Mesothelioma Lawyer

Contributed by Rob Mellor

It is important that you find a good, experienced Mesothelioma lawyer as soon as possible after you have been diagnosed with the disease. The earlier you get to a Mesothelioma lawyer, the better your chances of success.

The firm should be trustworthy and you should have a good rapport with it. If you are considering about filing a Mesothelioma lawsuit, you should meet up with several law firms before making the final decision. There are a large number of law firms who are specialized in filing Mesothelioma lawsuits. In order to choose the correct lawyer for filing your lawsuit, following steps can be followed

Where to start

You can look for a qualified Mesothelioma attorney in bar associations, Yellow Pages, and the Internet. Most law firms have their own sites.

Selecting the Mesothelioma lawyer

After compiling a list of some Mesothelioma law firms in your area, you can try to make contact with them either by email, mail or telephone for further information. Provide the law firms with details of your legal issue and find out if they can handle your situation. Also enquire about their fees for an initial consultation and an estimate of the total costs involved in handling a Mesothelioma lawsuit. If possible, make schedule appointments with two or three different law firms before making the final decision.

Meeting the Mesothelioma lawyer

During the initial consultation, it is important that you and your lawyer get to know each other. After studying your case, the lawyer must be in a position to inform you of your rights and suggest alternative courses of action. Moreover, it's during this initial consultation period that a Mesothelioma attorney can explain what he or she can do for you and how much it will cost. You must also get informed about the attorney's experience in handling previous Mesothelioma lawsuits. If you are totally satisfied with the details, you may request a written fee agreement before proceeding and a list of references that you may contact.

Post meeting Analysis

After each initial consultation, try and answer the following questions about your Mesothelioma lawyer - Did the lawyer listen to you, was he knowledgeable about asbestos law, did he give you a firm understanding of your alternative courses of action, did you understand the range of possible results associated with each course of action, did the lawyer seem trustworthy.

Fees

To lower costs, you may want to ask your asbestos lawyer if a junior lawyer or paralegal can perform some of the work. You may also want to ask if there are some tasks that you can perform yourself to save time and money. An asbestos lawyer may charge a flat fee for a specific task or offer other methods of payment. A contingent fee arrangement is that your lawyer gets a percentage of the compensation money you receive as resolution of your asbestos lawsuit. If you do not receive compensation for the lawsuit then your lawyer collects no fees. A contingency fee is a good option for those unable to pay hourly.
